My data in mongodb are: { "_id" : ObjectId("5c9cce3bb8dbafda192752ae"), "title" : "Event title", "name" : "Event name", "startDate" : ISODate("2020-07-03T00:00:00.000Z"), "endDate" : ISODate("2020-07-03T00:00:00.000Z"), "description" : "Hmmm. This is my description", "spam" : 100 } How can I make the spam = 50? In sql, it's as simple as: UPDATE entities SET spam=50 WHERE id=5 A: Assuming you're on MongoDB version 3.2 or higher, you can use the.findAndModify() method of the findAndModify command with the modifiers { $set: { spam: 50 } } to set the value. This method returns the modified object if it was updated, or a copy of it if it didn't. But if you want to execute the actual modification on the server, it's better to use the aggregate framework. See the documentation of findAndModify here. An ever increasing number of uses and functions have been assigned to mobile communication devices. Originally conceived primarily to provide voice communications, such devices are often used for accessing the Internet and sending text messages as well. Today, many people own multiple mobile communication devices, such as a standard desktop computer and a smart phone. Thus, many people not only access the Internet and receive text messages on their desktop computer, but use their smart phones or other mobile communication devices for the same purposes. With such a proliferation of mobile communication devices, a

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez has once again used her power to take aim at the world's most powerful tech company. Ocasio-Cortez and U.K. Green Party leader Caroline Lucas have called on Amazon to shut down its facial recognition program, Rekognition, which was designed to keep an eye on the masses and was used by law enforcement to identify suspects during the London terror attacks this weekend. The call came as customers protested on the UK company's website for a mere $1.34. "That charge is a clear indictment of the way our face recognition technology is being used as it is in violation of our right to privacy," Lucas said. "We have an opportunity here to set an example for other companies. ... We can say 'hey, no, the technology is for you to keep safe, not for you to be surveilled.'" The company, which is the world's largest retailer of its particular product, told the Guardian that it is not scanning images of people. "We do not scan any faces to identify people in photographs," an Amazon spokesperson said, adding that the system primarily identifies people of interest. "When we do identify a person of interest, we provide their name to law enforcement. Law enforcement accesses this information only from criminal records databases." Amazon also said it does not plan to sell the software to law enforcement or others, and that its reliability is "nearly perfect."
