AccuShutdown automatically saves your memory, so that your computer won't shut down in the middle of a task and start up again when you have to shut down your computer.

AccuShutdown uses the built-in Windows registry to check for the presence of a shutdown registry key. If the key isn't present, the application will simply create a shutdown registry key with a unique name, which means that the shutdown key will be automatically updated, so that it won't leave your computer in an inconsistent state. However, when the shutdown key is present and not marked "Auto", AccuShutdown will delete the shutdown key and then create one with "Auto" as the option. What's more, AccuShutdown will not stop your computer from shutting down without your consent unless it is actually your responsibility to manually shut

If you install this software on a computer running Windows 2000 or later version, AccuShutdown will create a scheduled shutdown timer to turn off your computer at the chosen time. AccuShutdown provides a "quick exit" option that will turn off your computer
